

ABSTRACT

A process for producing an aged beverage, preferably a distilled spirit that is aged in contact with wood, in which raw or partially aged beverage is processed in a closed system with controlled heat and oxygen levels, and in contact with a beverage aging wood product. In certain 5 embodiments ethyl acetate is added to the raw beverage prior to the aging process.